library

Now is a good time to visit the Regina Public Library and return your overdue library materials.

CUPE library workers are not collecting library fees or fines on overdue materials, as part of their strike for a fair agreement. As well, library patrons will not be prevented from borrowing because of fines or fees.

The more than 180 CUPE members at the library have been seeking a fair agreement for nearly 29 months.

Library workers walked off the job yesterday and held a rally and study session. Today, they returned to work and implemented a ban on the collection of fines and fees.

Library board refuses to bargain fair agreement

The library board cancelled conciliation talks last month and is refusing to negotiate a fair agreement.

Hold the library board accountable

Call or email the board and tell them to negotiate a fair settlement.
